ENGLISH INCONSISTENCY.

The Support Given Miss Wells and the Missionary Ship's Regulations.

Miss Wells, the colored agitator from Tennessee, is meeting with some success in her mission to induce England to point the finger of scorn at America on account of the treatment of the negroes. This is the season of all manner of annual meetings of missionary, religious and philanthropic societies, and all of them are asked to pass scorching resolutions condemning negro lynching and color distinctions in America. Most of the meetings respond willingly, not to say eagerly.

I paid a visit yesterday, by invitation of the London Missionary society, one of the oldest and wealthiest of these bodies, to the missionary ship John Williams, so named for the famous missionary who was killed and eaten by the natives of the New Hebrides. The ship is the largest and finest of its class and is intended to cruise among the Pacific islands. I was especially interested in the large, airy deck cabins, sumptuously fitted for 12 white missionaries. Looking about casually, I discovered another so called cabin forward between decks and fitted with bunks arranged in tiers for 30 colored missionaries. The difference was greater than between the staterooms of the Lucania and the steerage. The distance between the white and black laborers in the Lord's vineyard was as much as the vessel would allow.

I made respectful inquiries as to the reason of this color distinction, apparently so invidious, and was informed that the black missionaries do not like to be made too comfortable, not being fitted by nature to appreciate creature comforts like their white brothers. They are good enough to be educated and civilized and to be ordained as ministers of Christ, but in traveling the London Missionary society considers it perfectly right to provide a steerage for colored pastors and a saloon for white ones. I endeavored to ascertain whether the colored gentlemen had ever had a choice in the matter, but my questions were received coldly and considered inquisitorial.—London Cor. New York Sun.

AN UNUSUAL CASE.

The Business Public of London Surprised to Learn of a Rich Man's Illiteracy.

The longer we live the less easily are we surprised at anything that happens. It will scarcely be believed, though, that one of the wealthiest and most prosperous of the London tradesmen of today can neither read nor write, and that his wife is equally as uneducated as he is! A short time ago a letter reached him at his private residence in the country, and as he observed that some figures representing a large sum of money occurred among the writing he had the document deciphered. It then appeared that it was a letter from another tradesman complaining that his account, a very large one, had not been paid, notwithstanding that repeated requests for payment had been sent to the business house in town. Until then he had no suspicion that his firm owed even a farthing.

He has placed the matter in the hands of solicitors, and already it has been discovered that he has lost over £100 000 by the alleged misappropriation of money intended to be used for purposes connected with the business. As he is immensely wealthy, and as his business is in a very flourishing condition, even so great a loss will not materially affect him. Nevertheless it is a curious circumstance that at this date in the nineteenth century a man has succeeded in building up a vast business and has accumulated a large fortune in the center of London without either he or his wife being able to read or write.—London Graphic.

Wars Modern Horrors Will Kill War.

Various experments with the new rifles which have recently taken place in Germany have demonstrated in a very conclusive manner that another war would practically be one of annihilation. A well known French writer, in an article which he devotes to the subject, today says that the battlefield would at the termination of the engagement be covered with 200,000 or 300,000 corpses all crushed and broken and would be nothing but a vast charnel house. No one would be left to bury the dead, and pestilence would in its turn sweep away the country people. Pointing the moral, he adds that the man—emperor, king or president of the republic—who under these conditions would expose the human race to such a fate would be the greatest criminal that the world had ever seen. It is tolerably plain that the horrors and the butchery which a war would entail are becoming more and more recognized and that the terrible vista thus opened out is exercising a sobering effect on those who were formerly wont to discuss various eventualities with right heart.—London Telegraph.

The Largest Hat in the House.

To the casual observer of the house in session it looks as if Tom Reed, with his large Shakespearean head, would be the owner and wearer of the largest hat in the house. But it is not so. That honor belongs to Pennsylvania and to its Mr. Phillips. He wears the largest hat on either side of the capitol and has the further distinction of being an almost exact image of Brigham Young. He has the same heavy type of face as that of the great Mormon leader, and people who know the latter say the man from Pennsylvania walks like him too. Phillips is one of the men who discovered petroleum in Pennsylvania, and he was being brought up on a farm when he made that discovery.—Boston Advertiser.

Chicago's Dilapidated Postoffice.

The Stranger (in the Chicago postoffice)—Can you direct me to the general delivery window?

The Attendant (politely)—Certainly, sir. Follow the second crack in the wall till you come to a broken place in the ceiling, turn to your left and go straight ahead to where the plastering has fallen down.—Chicago Record.

It's the Standard Fashion, in washing and cleaning, to use Pearline. Certainly the enormous amount of it used every year proves it. Millions of women use nothing else. And when you see a fashion so universal, so sensible, and so unchangeable, why not adopt it?

There are many things that try to imitate Pearline. Some of them may be more or less successful for a while—but the public is learning. "You can't fool all the people all the time"—and the women who want the best thing to wash with, one that is absolutely safe, will continue to use Pearline—made only by James Pyle, New York. 403

"America's Greatest Men and Women."

AMERICA'S GREATEST MEN AND WOMEN.

MR. WILSON TALKS.

MY Name is Wilson; I do an insurance business on LaSalle street, in Chicago Ill., and I live in Evanston, Ill. Evanston is what was originally a scattering population on a pretty point on Lake Michigan, esteemed years ago far from the city of Chicago, but now one of the varied towns which may go within it by vote of the population.

I am married and have a wife and one child. That child is a boy (I suppose I should feel the same solicitude if it was a girl), and I have a father's natural fancies as to what must be the best thing to give that child the right kind of intelligence, and so divert his course that he may succeed in life. I have studied a great deal upon the subject. My own experience would not be of great value, because I have succeeded only to the limit of the average man and am barely established; still, I own the house and lot upon which I live, and am feeling perfectly safe in meeting the exigencies of the year. I want the boy to take a broader view than I did, to be a bigger man in the world. I have studied how to teach him to do that, and he has done pretty well, as far as the preliminaries go. Now, I have thought over what I should say to him and have sometimes been puzzled. I could not very well tell him what to do. I wanted to tell him what I needed but what I did not learn myself when I was of his age, and what my father did not know how to tell me, or else was not thoughtful enough to do so. I wanted to tell him how to follow the example of those who have succeeded at the present time and under the circumstances which ordinarily affect a young man struggling in this Republic established on this comparatively new world to-day. I wanted to tell him just what he had better do to get along well, and to point out to him what had been done by the people who were successful at the present time.

Of course, the record of the people of any time past would not be of so much value, because circumstances must necessarily have been different when they were alive. I feel confident, though, that if I could learn, some way and somehow, what the people who are so successful to day have done and how they did it, I could give to my boy such advice as would make his own life at least as far removed from failure as justified by the natural ability he may possess.

I looked around for some authority which I might consult in order to give him the facts most essential with this idea of mine in mind, but I could find none until I discovered that a great publishing firm in Chicago had decided to bring out a book giving the photographs of all the people who are prominent in America to-day. Here was what I wanted. The book, as I have learned, is going to be published in 16 parts, 16 pages to each, with a recent photograph on each page of some active leading American man or woman of to-day, while underneath appears the story of that same person's life—the story telling what that person did, and how the ends attained were eventually accomplished. Here was what I wanted, here was what I needed in various ways, here was what I was certainly seeking in order to obtain the information with which to educate my boy and secure for him that knowledge which will give him a source of thought and make him prominent in the world.

I have the first sheets of this work. It is a graphic story of America's Greatest Men and Women, told in each instance on a single page underneath a photograph of recent date, which conveys to the eye an idea of what that person is. To me the photograph tells even more than the suggestive record beneath, and yet it is odd how in each instance the correct story corresponds with the expression upon the face which is reproduced in the portrait above. I do not know how the series will end. I know very little about this new feature of the newspaper people, I know nothing about the publishers and their expectations, but I do know this, that if the series so begun should be continued to its practical, ordinary good sense end—and I don't care whether that will include 200 or 700 of America's Greatest Men and Women, which is the title of the book—I do know this, that for the ordinary, active and alert business man—I will certainly say far more for the student or the literary man, or the politician or the statesman—for all these I will say it will be simply the most valuable and the most remarkable book produced in modern history. The wonder is that some one has not thought of it before. Yet no one seems to have done so since the days of Plutarch. Plutarch knew something. That shrewd old fellow knew that all who would get out of the drift, all who would accomplish great things, wanted to know every detail of the lives of those who had better luck or more courage or a broader brain than their fellows, but I am no authority on these points. I only know that there is produced a second Plutarch's Lives, that its biographies are shrewd, graphic and curt, and written without bias and without prejudice. I only know that there was a Plutarch—God bless the old fellow—and that there is this modern work.

This is the work I am going to give to my boy. I am going to make him read it thoroughly. The work is announced as consisting of 16 Parts, with 16 pages and 16 photographs in each part, and when bound, the whole series will make a great volume of 256 pages, the like of which has never been equaled. It is the story of the personal character of the men and women who are making the nation's history at this particular time. What a work this is! Do you imagine that I would miss it for my boy, or, incidentally, for myself?

PREMIER AND HORSEMAN.

Nonconformists Charge That Rosebery Has Degraded English Statesmanship.

A ridiculous attack has been made upon Lord Rosebery because he happened to be the fortunate owner of a Derby winner. The word has gone forth to every large and small bethel that "the nonconformist conscience will not long tolerate a racing premier." Every tub thumping Sriggins has bowled at the noble earl for daring to say in a speech to the Eton college boys that he was not ashamed of owning a good horse. Even the newspapers which regularly quote the odds have joined in the outcry, and every mail brings his lordship hundreds of letters from meddling zealots, warning him that his patronage of horse racing is daily driving many souls to perdition. Radical parsons and puritanical lay partisans have deluged the Liberal headquarters at Westminster with epistolary protests to the same effect, and there is talk of convening "a national convention" for the purpose of protesting against "the shameful degradation of English statesmanship," from all of which it will be gathered that Great Britain has entered into one of those periodical virtuous spells which have long been the scorn and wonder of foreigners.

Lord Rosebery is said to be amazed and indignant at the outburst and to have threatened to retire in disgust from public life. But this is all nonsense, because, after all, the present outcry is merely a louder repetition of that which occurred when, with the commencement of the flat racing season, the puritans saw that the premier had no intention of quitting the turf. Besides he ought to know perfectly well that the nonconformists are simply suffering from a temporary moral spasm, and that in the estimation of the vast majority of people he has gained a new title to leadership by winning the Derby.

All the party managers admit today that Rosebery's character as an honorable, highly successful sportsman, indorsed as it has been by the victory of the horse upon which the masses had put their money, will stand him in good stead with thousands of electors who do not care a cent for politics but vote according to impulse.—London Cor. New York Sun.

A LANDLORD'S CONSCIENCE.

Lord Tweedmouth Shows What an Easy Thing His It to Get Along With.

Lord Tweedmouth, until recently Mr. Edward Marjoribanks, chief Liberal whip, has just compounded satisfactorily with his conscience, and some Radical newspapers are praising his nobility of soul and fidelity to principle uncommon in the ordinary mortal and rare in a peer of the realm. It seems that his father, old Lord Tweedmouth, invested tens of thousands of pounds, a part of the huge profits of his brewery, in land in the highlands of Scotland, and thereafter, as he was consumed with a passion for deer forests, in order to increase his stock of game he gradually cleared his land of industrious sheep farmers and small crofter tenants until he was able to drive for miles through his vast estate, known as Guisachen in Inverness, without meeting a single human being or passing one inhabited house.

The present lord, as a strong Radical, has always been opposed to that sort of thing. In fact, he is actually a member of the royal commission appointed to inquire into and report upon the depopulation of the Scottish highlands by landlords of the stamp of the late Lord Tweedmouth. Conscience and political expediency, therefore, alike forbade a member of the Radical government to continue a policy which had reduced to the poorhouse or sent to the plains of Manitoba and the shores of British Columbia hundreds of sturdy Scotsmen and Scotswomen. The natural and proper course for Lord Tweedmouth to follow would have been to reverse his father's policy and bring the people back to the land. But that would have been a sinful waste of the enormously increased value of the property as one of the best sporting estates in Scotland. So his lordship has decided to sell Guisachen as it stands, which, while easing his conscience, fills his pockets with gold gained out of the spoliation and expatriation of honest men.—Glasgow Letter.

An Octogenarian Wheelman.

A Portland man was in Sanford last week and reports that everybody is riding the bicycle there, from the toddler to the gray haired grandfather. He saw Mr George Goodall, the owner and originator of the plush mills and now about 80 years old, pedaling rapidly along the street on a pneumatic. It was not a bicycle nor yet a tricycle of the old kind, but a special machine, undoubtedly built especially for the old gentleman. It was like any pneumatic tire safety, except that there were two rear wheels instead of one. They were about two feet apart, and of course the machine would stand alone. The chain passed around cogs on the axle between the two rear wheels. Mr Goodall is doubtless the oldest wheelman in the state.—Portland Press.

Smallest Woman on Earth.

Since the death of Lucia Zarate, the "Mexican midget," the title of being the smallest woman on earth has fallen to Mlle. Pauline, a native of Holland. She is now nearly 18 years of age, is but 20 inches high and weighs a few ounces less than 9 pounds. Unlike most midgets, who are usually hideous monstrosities, she is remarkably pretty and accomplished, speaking four different languages fluently.—St. Louis Republic.

Martha's or Martin's Vineyard.

Some of the antiquarians are trying to make out that the proper name of New England's best known island is Martin's Vineyard, instead of Martha's Vineyard. It is plainly another attempt to keep the woman inferior to the man, a revival of the rankest old fogyism, which will find little favor in this progressive age. We'll have none of it.

COUGHED DAY AND NIGHT.

MRS. L. F. COATES.

Three years ago, I was so sick I could not eat, sleep or walk, for I coughed all day and night, my weight was reduced from 150 to 127 pounds. The first night that I slept four hours at one time, was after I had taken three doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The offensive matter expectorated grew less every day and when I had taken the whole of one bottle I could sleep all night without coughing, and have been well ever since and weigh 148 pounds.

A MINISTER ON IRELAND.

In a copy of the Memphis (Tenn.) Avalanche we read an interesting lecture delivered the Rev. David Wark, to the congregation of the Linden Street Christian Church in that city. The lecture was the result of a tour through Europe, and the reverend gentleman thus speaks of his feelings when he first beheld the coast of Ireland

"The coast of Ireland! How the words thrilled me. I no longer heard the rush of the water; I no longer noted the rolling and tossing of the ship; I ceased to think of the laboring groaning engines. I thought only of the blessed, solid earth on which my eyes were feasting. Yes, there could be no mistake; those are the towering hills of Ireland. There she stands like a dear mother, stretching forth her arms over the stormy deep, inviting her children to her breast; rising up from the ocean like a beautiful goddess, she is the first to offer rest to weather-beaten mariners, and to give the traveler of the New World a welcome. Long live old Ireland! Green be her fields; bright be her skies, and happiness be the portion of her sons and daughters."

Alluding to Catholic and Protestant Ireland, he said: "My business is to state facts—not to make them. Of course, I had ever been taught—in fact I had read it in the Sunday school books, that the North of Ireland, which is supposed to be Protestant, is greatly superior to the South of Ireland, which is supposed to be Catholic. Now, I have been through Ireland from the extreme South to the North, and I aver upon the honor of a gentleman and a christian, that a greater fraud than the assumed superiority of the Protestant over the Catholic population of Ireland was never palmed off upon an innocent and unsuspecting public. It is pitiful when men attempt to coin religious capital out of such material On the other hand, I saw more squalor, more abject misery, more poverty and wretchedness in Glasgow and Edinburgh than in the whole of Ireland put together. Scotland is Protestant, Ireland is Catholic. I say it is my duty to state facts as I see them, and not allow religious prejudice to blind my eyes to the truth. The sun of heaven shines on no fairer spot than the South of Ireland. From Mallow, on the Blackwater, to Cork on the Lee, it is pure and beautiful as a dream in the heart of a sinless maiden I saw just two cities in Europe which I should care to live in. One of these is Dundee, in Scotland, the other Cork, in Ireland—with a decided preference for Cork. Everywhere in Ireland I was treated like a gentleman. Never for an instant was I mistreated by a human being."

A Philanthropist.

"What is the subject of your lecture?" inquired the editor.

The Czar of Hard Times and Hayto Civil Taxation replied the gifted orator, "is the theme of the hour. It is in its very essence purely philanthropic I anticipate a large audience on the matter of free notes. By the way," he added hurriedly, "I want to fill a flank in this advertisement. I will attend to it."

And no doubt the clergyman filled the blank after the words "Price of admission, ——," inserting the accepted characters, "$1."—Chicago Tribune

DRINKS OVER A COFFIN COUNTER.

The Parisian, Straining After the Horrible, Introduces a Gruesome Custom.

The Paris correspondent of the Glasgow Herald has been dwelling on the strange taste for the horrible and grewsome which at the present moment characterizes the performances at cafe concerts in the gay city." The culminating point in this direction seems to have been reached at a cabaret just opened in the Boulevard Rochechouart, which goes by the name of the Cabaret de la Mort.

This grimly baptized place of amusement is but a few yards distant from the popular music hall known as the Gaiete Rochechouart, where rollicking fun is the order of the day, and things of too broad a description to suit the taste of Senator Berenger are encored with indescribable enthusiasm by an audience composed of the peculiar class of society to be met with in the Montmartre district and its surroundings.

Remembering the traditional respect and veneration in which the French hold the dead, the correspondent was surprised to find it largely patronized. On entering the low roofed house the door of which is ornamented with a death's head and cross bones an inspector is somewhat taken aback to find him self in the presence of a number of "croquemorts" (hall porters) dressed precisely as they are for a funeral. These are the waiters who are trained not to smile to talk cheerfully or to accept any gratuity, and whose whole demeanor is very suggestive of the tomb by a dim religious light, and generally mournful aspect, not a chilly feeling upon one in spite of the knowledge that all is assumed.

There was, moreover, a very unpleasant smell about the place due, no doubt to the fact that the coffins which do duty as tables are quite new. At these coffins a score or so of customers were seated—a few women among them—drinking beer coffee or liquor. The whitewashed walls of the room are adorned, as a matter of course, with funeral engravings, drawings or pictures. There are skeletons everywhere—a skeleton by way of change—and, to complete a delightful exhibition of the horrible and sinister. A notice is posted up to the effect that on Friday (the unlucky day of the week) the charge for refreshments of all kinds is raised half a franc, and that on that and every other day the charge made for a block or a gregory is the customer the right to visit the cellars beneath the cabaret, to which he is attracted by the information that there he will see what becomes of his body after death.

A MARVELOUS SIGHT

A frozen soap bubble "broken in two and floating like an iridescent transparent eggshell on the surface of a vessel of liquid air was one of the marvelous sights shown by Professor Dewar in a recent lecture at the Royal institution on the effects of intense cold. The invention of this new field of scientific investigation is among wonderful hits of the edge, some of which promise to be turned to valuable practical account before long.

The professor poured a few spoonfuls of liquid air into a glass vessel. The intense cold caused the vapor of the surrounding atmosphere above the liquid to become visible, and a red mist filled the lecture room atmosphere.—The bubble was then blown. The movements of the bubble resembled fine snowflakes. It soon contracted somewhat in size and a prismatic tint was visible. A slight movement broke it from the rod in two pieces, which floated for an hour, gradually accumulating a heavy snowdrift on them, precipitated from the freezing air above.—London Standard.

Doesn't Believe In Hoodoos, But ——

If anybody in Chicago possesses a magic talisman, he can get a good price for it by applying to J. W. Levy, 1211 Calumet avenue. Mr. Levy is of the opinion that a large sized hoodoo has moved into his neighborhood and gone to housekeeping.

Wednesday morning Mrs. Levy lost her pocketbook containing $25. Two hours later Miss Levy had her muff and pocketbook stolen in a State street store. The same day Mr. Levy received a telegram that one of his firm's creditors had failed.

The creditor was in debt to the firm for $200 worth of goods. And to round out the hard luck story of a day Mr. Levy discovered on returning that some one had stolen a certain umbrella which he had worn that day for the first time.

"I'm not a believer in hoodoos," said Mr. Levy last night, "but it is very strange that my wife, my daughter and myself should all be robbed the same day. I never experienced anything of the kind before."—Chicago Record.

SHE COULDN'T KEEP STILL.

A Reporter's Harrowing Experience With the New Typewriter Girl.

For a reporter with but little to write and plenty of time in which to write it there is nothing more pleasant than to dictate a matter of fact to a cheerful typewriter, particularly if she be young and have nice soft hair to distract the eye, and well formed white fingers and be withal exceedingly pleasing. But for a reporter with a long yarn to write and a limited amount of time to finish it things sometimes have a different aspect.

Near Printing House square is a typewriting office which many newspaper men frequent. A new girl came there one day last week—a real nice girl and an excellent operator—but she had never done that kind of work before. While she was sitting in the main room upon the afternoon of her first day a newspaper man came bustling in and——

"Mrs. J., have you got anybody to take a two column story in a hurry?"

"Yes," replied the manager. "Here is a young lady who has just come to us. Miss Brown—Mr. Smith. You can go into that corner room."

In three minutes the young lady was seated at her machine, the newspaper man was sorting out his notes, and the door was closed so as to leave them undisturbed.

"Now, if you will please begin," the newspaper man said. In these days of stern reality and suffering and struggle for existence a romantic episode comes upon one with the refreshing delight with which a traveler in a desert beholds an oasis.

Clickety-clickety-click went the keys, and then——

"Is it that lovely? Is it going to be a novel?"

The newspaper man looked up in amazement, but it was utterly impossible to be angry with such blue eyes regarding him in admiration.

"No," he said. "Please go on. In the monotonous routine of Tombs police court cases, however, there was one yesterday, behind which lay a story so romantic and so picturesque that it would almost seem to have been created by a great novelist who had striven to excel all his past efforts."

When this had been recorded and while the newspaper man was wondering what he would say next, the young lady smiling most radiantly, prattled on in this fashion:

"That's just splendid. It sounds like a real novel. Did you ever read Clarissa; or, the Forlorn Hope? It begins something like that; only it isn't so interesting. Do you know, I never took dictation like that before. The last place I worked in I had nothing to do but copy letters. Oh dear, wasn't it tiresome, though?"

The newspaper man felt his collar getting too small, but after swallowing something that seemed to stick in his throat he said as gently as possible:

"Won't you please go on? I am in somewhat of a hurry. What have you got there?"

"Where?" in great surprise. "I am sure I have read over what I have done."

"Oh, how stupid I am! In the days of stern reality,—how do you pronounce that word in two syllables or three? Thank God—stern reality and suffering."

And she read what she had written. Then just as the newspaper man had settled back in his chair, determined to dictate to the end without giving her another opportunity to break up his train of thought, she said:

"Excuse me; I think my hair is coming down."

She went to a little mirror in a corner of the room, examined her hair carefully, and then after touching up the puffs of her sleeves and smoothing her waist, she sighed and returned to her seat.

"There, now I am all ready."

For the next few minutes she had to work so hard that she hadn't time to say a single word. But soon the page was filled and she had to insert a new sheet, and that was her opportunity.

"Gracious how fast you dictate! It almost takes my breath away, but, do you know, I like it. I think it's good practice. Were you there when all that happened? My! I wish I could be a reporter!"

The newspaper man went on with his dictation. He was fast growing hopping mad but he hadn't the heart to say a harsh word to the girl. She was really very pretty, and as she became interested in the story a delicate flush mantled her cheeks and it was a pleasure to watch her. But a newspaper man has no time for pleasure during business hours, and these charms failed to interest him as much as they might have done under other circumstances. He struggled bravely on.

"Er——" he only exclaimed stopping in the middle of a sentence, did that——"

"Yes?" "Will you please go on?"

"Well, the idea! I wouldn't have believed it. Do you know I don't believe half what I read in the papers. But of course it would say so, it must be true."

"I'm sorry I can't chat with you Miss Brown, but really I'm in a great hurry."

"Oh! I beg your pardon! I forgot all about you."

For nearly 10 minutes there was no break in the dictation save when the typewriter became full and the bell rang. Then the typewriter kept right on as if she were never through. Finally, however, she said:

"I don't

Nine new cases, Sunday, by the breaking of the log jam, at Rocky Rock, then were 25 fever cases. The list of the missing will exceed, yesterday, by inspection, fifty-five bodies have as yet been recovered.

Senator Lamar entertained Secretary Gresham, Chief and Deputy of the Investigating committee, at his home in Rocky Rock last night. The object is to hold open in Rocky, as an informal consideration of his Senate, gubernatorial nomination.

The United cattle press agent, at Rocky Rock, was found last week. By using the Times with Shipping Bulletin the light could easily read in New York, several miles away, and the party who received the messages believed that they could have been read at a distance of thirty or more miles. The light on roof in New York, Brooklyn, is described as about as bright as that of a half moon on a clear night.

Bishop McGrath, of Rochester, in his sermon at the opening session of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Rochester, Monday, was intensely American. Among other things he said: "You should support it in anticipation, but remember it is highly dangerous, for an Ancient and Order to be allowed with a power similar to any of the Republican countries. We are still of Europe, and the less we have to do with it the better."

At the meeting of the Board of Engineers, appointed by the President, to pass upon the bridge of 1894 on the practicability of the other plans for the Harlem River bridge, Chief Engineer Gluck, of the Bridge Company, stated that the cost of the plan, which it was proposed to build on the New Jersey side of the river, would not be less than $5,000,000. The Board of Engineers ordered new borings to ascertain the topography of the river bottom at various points.

At Williams, Miss., yesterday, John E. Feltman made the fastest mile ever ridden on a bicycle. With a flying start he rolled off a mile in 1:59. He—then beating by 1 fifth of a second Windle's (Eng.) record of 1 m 4 3 h.—rode at Springfield, Mass., and his own record of 1:58 1-5, the fastest mile ever made in public. The conditions were not entirely favorable, a strong east wind setting against the rider's progress over part of the course, and it is believed that but for this handicap the record would have been lowered still further.

The cause for incorporating an aqueduct has taken such a strong hold on the villagers of Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., that within the past week 60 voters, in favor of the citizens voting upon, no less than twenty resolutions, have been handed in, and the "resolutionist boroughs," as they are called, will have an hour given citizens so that the adoption of the borough form of government against all political odious to be filed. The petitioners citizens provided for the election borough until thereafter of others to be filed in 30, at least there will be good opportunity for the heads of those boroughs to consider their case of the world to prevent of too much. To such an extent has the cause for borough government gone that recently nothing remained of those of the original townships of Dutchess county.

IS MRS. HALLIDAY'S SISTER.

Mary Long Says Lizzie's Mind Was Unbalanced Eleven Years Ago.

Mary Long, wife of John Long, a sawyer in a planing mill in Newburgh, who has before denied it, now admits that she is a sister of Lizzie Halliday, the convicted murderess.

Mrs. Long said, yesterday, it was true she had written to Sheriff Beecher that she would not give five cents to save Mrs. Halliday's life, but it was when Lawyer Carpenter wanted $400 for defending her.

She believed her sister to be insane and says that their father was mentally unbalanced for seven years before his death.

There were nine children in the McNally family, of whom Mrs. Halliday was one. Another was Mrs. Jane Demey, who died at her home in Washington county, N. Y., of grief two weeks after the McQuillan murder and that of old Paul Halliday.

Mrs. Long says that the maiden name of her sister was Margaret—not Elizabeth McNally. She was well behaved as a little girl. Her first husband, named Hopkins, she married seventeen years ago in Washington county, this State.

The last time Lizzie, or Margaret, was in Mrs. Long's house in Newburgh, was eleven years ago. Then she brought her little boy there for a visit.

Her sister says Margaret's mind was affected then, and she said Hopkins had threatened to shoot her.

"Did she ever have strange spells at home?" was asked.

"Yes, one time she took hold of my father and abused him terribly. She had also attacked my sister Jane. Once she was missing for four years Father died in Newburgh about that time. We did not know whether Margaret was living or dead. She came back afterwards, and when she heard that father was dead she wanted to tear him up out of the grave. She dug away much of the earth before she was stopped."

Almost Kicked Herself Free from Her Shackles.

A Monticello dispatch says that although Mrs. Halliday has eaten little since Friday, she has lost none of her strength.

Sheriff Beecher heard her making a disturbance in her cell, last night, and rushing in discovered that she was making a frantic efforts to free herself from the chain by which she is shackled to the floor of her cell. She had been kicking with her shackled leg until she had straightened cut one of the links of the chain. She continued kicking after the Sheriff had entered the cell, and he had to take her by the shoulders and force her down on her bed. The chain was straightened and a closer watch will be kept on the woman.

It is expected that, to-day, Judge Edwards will name the woman's prison at Auburn as the place to which Mrs. Halliday must be taken for execution, and Sheriff Beecher will lose no time in getting rid of his troublesome prisoner and will start with her Thursday.

A MOST SHOCKING ACCIDENT.

A Child Killed by an Erie Train—The Mother Looked on Helplessly—The Little One Torn from Its Father's Grasp by the Engine and Carried a Quarter of a Mile.

Josie Pauline, the two-year-old daughter of Charles H. Fredenberg, foreman of the creamery at Blooming Grove, was struck and instantly killed, last night, by train 184 on the Erie's Newburgh branch. W. H. Canfield was the engineer and C. H. Gordon conductor.

The little girl was standing on the edge of the track, near her home, and was not seen by the engineer until the train was almost upon her as there is a sharp curve at this point. He reversed his engine, but could not stop the heavy train as it was running at a high speed.

The mother of the child, hearing the whistle of the engine, ran to the window and saw the little one on the track. She uttered a piercing scream, which attracted the attention of the father, who was near by, and he ran to the rescue of the child. He grasped its clothing and was dragging it from the track, when the cylinder cock struck the little girl on the temple, the handle of the cock penetrating the skull, and maintaining its hold so firmly as to tear the child from the father's grasp and carry it a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile, when the body dropped to the ground. The child's feet were dangling on the rail and were crushed by the wheel.

Coroner Decker, of this city, was called to hold an inquest, Coroner Corwin, of Newburgh, being confined to his home with illness.

SULLIVAN COUNTY'S NEXT MURDER TRIAL.

Osterhout and Odell to Be Tried in the Fall for the Bushville Murders—Evidence Against Them Purely Circumstantial—Gave Themselves Away—Osterhout's Pretense of Insanity

Special Correspondence of DAILY ARGUS.

Although the Halliday trial is at an end and the exciting events of the murder are still fresh in the minds of the public, Sullivan county will, next fall, furnish another murder trial that will be of far more interest than the one just concluded. I refer to the trial of Osterhout and Odell for the murder of old Jacob Moore and his housekeeper Mrs. Stark, at Bushville, which it will be remembered, occurred on the night of February 22nd.

The brutal way in which the murders were committed and the extreme age of the victims mark the crime as one of the most atrocious that has ever been committed in Sullivan county, and that is saying a good deal, for Sullivan county has a blood stained record. The lack of any direct evidence to incriminate any one as the perpetrator of the crime adds much mystery to it, and District Attorney Hill will have a much harder task to prove the guilt of the men suspected of and indicted for the murders than he had to prove Mrs. Halliday's sanity.

A number of suspects were arrested, but all were released save two, Hiram Osterhout, of Hurleyville, and John Odell, of Livingston Manor. At first but little evidence was obtained even against these two, but little by little, from here, from there, has been gathered testimony that while not absolutely conclusive leads to the belief that they are the murderers, and that at least one other person was a party to the crime.

The immediate motive for the murder was the belief that Jacob Moore had a large amount of money in his possession, part of the pension he had received from the government.

The scheme of the murder was well laid, and had it not been for a few trivial "breaks" made by both Osterhout and Odell, they would never have been suspected, although both are typical Sullivan county toughs, a type as distinct as is their counterpart on the Bowery.

From what evidence that has been already gathered it would appear that Osterhout and Odell committed the bloody deed, while a third man kept watch for them.

Your correspondent had a brief interview with Osterhout in the county jail at Monticello. As is well known he "went daft" after his indictment and is believed to be attempting to sham insanity a la Mrs. Halliday, but his efforts are not to be compared to the artistic work of the former. He gave fairly intelligible answers to ordinary questions, but his ceaseless repititions of his answers showed clearly that his insanity is only a sham.

While this and other murders fresh in the memory are a disgrace to Sullivan county, yet the good people there must not forget that they are not without some advantages. The county has never been so well advertised as at present. The magnificent scenery, pure air and agreeable temperature of the summer days and nights have been brought to the attention of the sweltering folk of New York and Brooklyn more forcibly than ever before, and the prompt conviction of Mrs. Halliday assures them that Sullivan county justice is swift and sure and that old Sullivan is not a dangerous place to live in.

HYMENEAL.

Powers—Phillips

There was a quiet, but none the less interesting wedding, at the residence of Mr. J. W. Phillips, No 123 East Main street, at 1 o'clock this afternoon, when his daughter, Miss Genevieve, was united in marriage with Mr. John D. Powers, an employe of the saw works.

Only relatives and a few intimate friends were present.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Chas. Beattie, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, after which the bride and groom and their guests sat down to a fine wedding breakfast.

Mr. and Mrs. Powers left town on Erie train 2 for a short wedding tour. After their return they will take up their residence in apartments already prepared for occupancy in the house of the bride's parents.

From our regular correspondent.

—St. James's Guild will give a festival, Tuesday, July 3rd.

—Water polo is the favorite pastime of a number of young men, every evening, at the Wallkill.

—The following were elected officers of Orange Lodge, I. O. O. F., for the ensuing term: Chas. Quick, N. G.; John Gregory, V. G.; H. P. Tuthill, Secretary; Chas. S. Hulse, Treasurer; E. J. Tuthill, Representative to Grand Lodge: Chas. Knapp, alternate.

IN ANCIENT GOSHEN.

Some Local and Personal Notes—A Pleasant Social Event in Prospect—People Not So Irritable as They Are Represented—The Truth Not Always Pleasant.

From a special correspondent.

—Rev. Dr. Martin, of Philadelphia, preached at St. James's Church, on Sunday.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lockwood, of Buffalo, spent Sunday in Goshen. Mrs. Lockwood will remain in this village during the next month as the guest of her mother, Mrs. Hannah Wallace.

—Miss Alice Neafie, who has been spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Strait, at Bradford, Pa., has returned to her home in this village.

—The Misses Haight have issued invitations for a party to be given at their home on Main street, on Friday evening.

—It is said that the hot weather has a tendency to make people irritable. If this is so why is the person allowed to live who asks you, when you are simmering and the mercury climbing upward with the agility of a cat and still calling "Excelsior!," whether it is warm enough for you. It would seem as though such an insult could only be wiped out with blood, but perhaps its gray hairs protect it. It is a singular thing that this bit of wit should have been popular for so many years. It wasn't so very funny to begin with, and time has not added luster to its brightness. Perhaps the one thing that protects the life of the person who perpetrates it is the thought of the day of reckoning which will surely come to him in another world when, no doubt, the same question will be asked of him derisively. "The mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceedingly small." Speaking of irritability is there anything much more trying than to be told you are cross when you really are? To be accused of a fault that you know you have not is not nearly so bad, for it gives you a sort of an early Christian martyr's feeling that is not altogether unpleasant, although, as a rule, in modern times, we do not have much taste for martyrdom. If we were obliged to wear peas in our shoes in our pilgrimage through life, most of us would prefer, like the jolly old friar of whom we have all read, to have them boiled before we started out. To hear the truth about ourselves may be wholesome, but we generally would rather she had stayed in her well than to have come out and meddled with our affairs. It is one thing to confess ourselves miserable sinners and quite another to have some one else say we are. Somehow, that is prone to raise a spirit of contradiction in us, and we at once begin to think of extenuating circumstances, and to think we are very decent sort of people after all. G. H.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

THE OLD SONGS.

It was a hired parlor a brilliant pianist had just rendered one of Wagner's most difficult pieces and a murmur of well bred applause followed. Then very softly and tenderly, like a sweetly tremulous old voice reciting pathetic memories, the ivory keys sent the plaintive melody of "Auld Lang Syne" sighing through the room. The idle chatter ceased, every mind was busy with bitter sweet memories, and the air was full of the scent of vanished clover, the warm fragrance of newly tossed hay, the echo of babbling brooks. The simple tune knocked at the door of every heart, and the ghosts of dead days came trooping forth in answer.

A stout dame on the musician's left looked away through the open window, beyond the moon flooded hills, and a sigh scintillated the jet upon her ample bosom. She had gone back to a summer eve years ago and was dressed in a faded pink calico and flapping sunbonnet again. Her bare toes sank deep in the yellow dust of the country road as she drove the cows home through the lonely, cool shadows. John Edward, freckled faced and honest eyed, came sheepishly out of the woods and joined her, and the cows were late that night, for what has young love to do with time?

A dignified old gentleman beside her blew his nose and incidentally wiped his eyes. He was thinking of the morning when he went out to seek his fortune and turned under the windy orchard trees to a wave of last farewell to a mother, who stood in the door with her check apron to her eyes. He had whistled "Auld Lang Syne" to keep back the rising sobs as he trudged upon his way.

Not a word was spoken when the last memory haunted note died away in silence, but every one had paid the tribute of a tear to "Auld Lang Syne."

An almost forgotten poet, Robert Hinckly Messinger, quaintly wishes for old wood to burn, old books to read and old friends to talk with in an ideal old age, and he might also have added old tunes to be played in the long twilights in which he dozed and dreamed in an easy chair. It is a fact that none of the popular songs of late years survives a mayfly existence. They catch the lip, but do not hold the heart, and are written to cater to the popular fancy, unlike the old tunes which are birth marked with the joys and woes of the human race.

Music hall melodies may come and go and be forgotten, but as long as a sprig of heather blossoms on Scottish moors "Highland Mary" will bring tears to Scottish eyes, and the cruelty of "Barbara Allen" will go down through all the ages while lads go courting and lasses are capricious. Every sailor leaves a "Black Eyed Susan" in port behind him, and there is a chord in every bosom set to the wanderer's immortal cry, "Home, Sweet Home." "Annie Laurie" will live as long as the English language. Neither a Handel nor a Beethoven composed the "Marseillaise," yet it became the battlecry of a nation. It is not to the music of the symphony societies that the dying turn, but to "Rock of Ages."

Many of Gilbert & Sullivan's catchy melodies are borrowed from old ballads, and they have even "Mother Goose" to thank for some of their success.

Strauss may set the feet to dancing, Wagner tickle the brain and Mozart please the ear, but nothing can touch the heart like the old tunes.—Philadelphia Press.

Putting Wolves to Death by Torture.

One use of the whalebone to which the Eskimos put it, and one case of which came under my personal observation, I must not allow to pass unnoticed. Whenever wolves have been unusually predatory, have destroyed a favorite dog or so, or dug up a cache of reindeer meat just when it was needed, or in any way have aroused the ire of the Innuit hunter, he takes a strip of whalebone about the size of those used in corsets, wraps it up into a compact helical mass like a watch spring, having previously sharpened both ends, then ties it together with reindeer sinew and plasters it with a compound of blood and grease, which is allowed to freeze and forms a binding cement sufficiently strong to hold the sinew string at every second or third turn. This, with a lot of similar looking balls of meat and blubber, is scattered over the snow or ground, and the hungry wolf 6 years it along with the others and when it is thawed out by the warmth of the stomach it changes shape and has the well known effect of whalebone on the system, but having the military advantage of interior lines its effects are more rapid, killing the poor wolf, with the most horrible agonies, in a couple of days.—From an Interview With Eugene Melville, U. S. N.

A Breakfast, 1708.

Mr. Waddell, in his curious "Voyage Up the Thames," from Somerset Stairs to Windsor, in a sailing barge or boat, in March, 1708, notes that ale was then still served for breakfast. Having started about 4 o'clock one afternoon, the next morning—

We arrived safe at Staines about Ten in the Forenoon, and went to a House of Entertainment, where everything appeared in a very good Taste. Breakfast was brought, consisting of Chocolate, Coffee, Bisk, Cheese, Ale and Wine. I mention the Particulars, because it was the first time I remember seeing things brought in this manner, and is what I approve of, since in a Company of six Men, it is natural to expect at least one or two who can breakfast on Bread and Ale. The Drink Sippit was the only one among us of that Stamp. P. 76.

The Clock Winding Snake.

In Persia there is a kind of snake which is known to the natives as the clock winding snake. It derives its name from a peculiar buzzing noise which it makes that resembles the winding of a clock. These snakes are perfectly harmless and frequently glide in and out of the houses, no attention being paid to them by the natives. During a visit there several years ago I was attracted one morning by an unusual twittering of birds, and on looking up saw about 20 sparrows on the top of a wall, all jumping about in an excited manner.

At first I was at a loss to understand the cause of such a commotion, but presently I heard the peculiar buzzing of the clock winding snake and in a minute perceived the reptile crawling along the wall, making directly for the birds, which appeared to be fascinated and made no attempt to fly away. The snake glided in among the birds, and choosing one to his liking deliberately seized it in his mouth and swallowed it. I picked up a stick, and after killing the snake cut him open and extracted the sparrow. After about 10 minutes' exposure to the sun the bird got up, and in a few minutes more flew away apparently unhurt.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Rosebery's Foresight.

The foresight Lord Rosebery displayed in arranging his matrimonial plans is illustrated in the following anecdote: Shortly after he had returned from his continental tour he was one of a house party at Mentmore, a lordly pleasure house which Baron Meyer Rothschild had built for himself in Buckinghamshire. One evening, at dinner, the conversation turned on the exquisite decorations of the room. Lord Rosebery's observation to his next neighbor, by way of epilogue to the conversation, was, "Yes, this place would suit me excellently." When, seven years later, he had married the daughter of the house and was the owner of Mentmore, his friend, happening to meet him, reminded him of this observation. Lord Rosebery replied with assumed gravity, but with a telltale twinkle in his eye, "Well, of course you know that the unexpected always happens."—San Francisco Argonaut.

AN "ARGUS" MAN OFF DUTY AIMS AT SEVERAL SUBJECTS.

Postage Due Love Letters.—A Beautifully Vine-Clad Church.—Resting the North Street Pavement.—Unconscious Homage to the Dignity of Labor.

What I said in this column, yesterday, about postage due letters, led a prominent business man to tell of his experience in "taking out of hock," his maid servant's love letters. It seems that the aforesaid maid's young man is employed in a neighboring village. His duties cannot be very arduous for he seems to have abundant leisure for letter writing and his missives are of the "tell it all and tell it over again" kind, and are so bulky that at least two cents postage is due on each and every one of them. They come addressed in care of the girl's employer and he puts up the necessary cash to get them out of Uncle Sam's keeping. He insists that he don't mind the small outlay of cash that is involved, but that every time he hands out two cents for one of these letters he feels a pang of real sorrow for the girl, who is throwing herself away on a man who don't know enough, or who is too careless, to pay the postage on his love letters.

Have you noticed how very pretty the vines on Grace Church are this year? Probably you have not, for we seldom notice what we see every day. Take a good look at the church the next time you go in or out of the post office, and you will see as charming a bit of greenery as can be seen anywhere. There is no prettier creeper than the woodbine. It is not as rank a grower as the vetch, but the lighter green of the latter affords no such beautiful contrasts as are seen in the dark leaves on the older parts of the woodbine and the fresh, bright green of the leaves of the new growth. The vetch, too, clings so closely to the wall that it never hangs in the rich, heavy festoons that make a well grown woodbine a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The bossing of the job of paving North street by the sidewalk committee goes bravely on. There is nothing thrilling nor essentially interesting in seeing the men putting the blocks in place, mixing the concrete or spreading it on the street and yet, I venture to say, that at no time since the work began have the workmen been without supervision from the sidewalks. The faithfulness with which some well known citizens have watched the progress of the work has become something of a joke among North street business men, but despite jibes and jokes they seem to prefer the curb of North street to any other place in town and will probably remain on duty until the last brick is laid.

It is a curious phase of human nature that is illustrated in these sidewalk committeemen. It isn't the novelty of the work that attracts them, for the novelty wore off when the first hundred bricks were laid. It isn't interest in a public improvement for some of these sidewalk bosses are not famed for their public spirit. I can account for the pleasure that they take in watching the work, in no other way than by assuming that men, who do not and will not do manual labor themselves, like to see others toil and sweat—not because it gives them a selfish satisfaction with their own more favored lot, but because there is something in human effort, in the exhibition of brawn and muscle, that appeals to a latent sense. I may be doing these sidewalk loungers all too much honor, but I like to think their unflagging interest in the North street improvement, is the homage,—unconscious perhaps, but not the less real—which they are paying to the dignity of labor.

PUBLIC VOICE.

An Earnest Appeal in Behalf of a Beautiful Charity, the Fresh Air Fund.

EDITORS ARGUS.—With your kind permission I would desire to bring before the Middletown public the claims of an exquisite charity, I mean, the Tribune Fresh Air Fund, feeling sure that there must be very many among the residents of this city and the neighborhood, who will be glad to show a practical sympathy with the beautiful idea. For the benefit of any one who may not have a clear notion of the object of the Fresh Air Fund, I would say that it is a charity for the benefit of the poor children of New York city, by means of which many thousands of little ones are transplanted for two weeks, every summer, from the swarming tenement districts of the great Metropolis, into the pure and wholesome surroundings of some country home.

The charity began in a small way in the year 1877, and since that time has steadily grown in favor, until last year as many as 14,000 children were enabled to enjoy this life-giving excursion.

One question naturally suggests itself which I should like to answer. Is there no danger in bringing children directly out of the tenements into families where the children are so differently trained? The danger is by no means as great as it may appear. The children are selected with the greatest care by devoted workers from the church missions, Bible missions, hospitals, industrial schools and kindred organizations, and are carefully examined as to their health by physicians detailed by the Board of Health. The very great care exercised in the selection is proven by the fact that out of 15,000 children examined, last year, by one of these doctors, only 5,000 were passed, and not a single word of complaint or dissatisfaction reached the Fresh Air authorities in connection with this large number.

On the contrary, the following letter from a clergyman in Massachusetts is only a sample of hundreds of the same tenor:

"We want to thank you," he wrote "for giving us the opportunity to do so much good. The children whom you sent have left a rich blessing behind them, and have actually given more than they received. They have touched the hearts of the people and opened the fountains of love, sympathy and charity. Any inconvenience to which we have been put during the two weeks is insignificant now, as we look at these thirty glad little faces and think of the purifying and strengthening influences that have come into their young lives during their two weeks stay among us."

I cannot but believe there are many loving hearts in Middletown full of that tender sympathy for children, which is such a characteristic American trait, and I, therefore, bring this appeal before them with confidence that it will not be heard in vain.

Help can be given in money or by volunteering to entertain a child for two weeks, and I would say that for the greater security of any who are willing to give the "cup of cold water" to one of God's little ones, I shall myself go down to New York at the appointed time to assist in the selection of the children to be invited up here.

Any contributions that are sent me I will instantly acknowledge. The average cost of keeping a child in the country for two weeks is $2.50.

EDITORS ARGUS: The report in regard to diphtheria, at Chester, is fearfully exaggerated. There are a few cases in a mild form, and thus far there has been but one death, and within the last forty-eight hours no new cases have been reported.

President of the Village of Chester.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

A Public Meeting in Middletown—Miss Katherine Stagg to Deliver an Address.

Miss Katherine Stagg, of New York, arrived in town, to day, to begin the agitation of the woman suffrage question in our city. She is a very bright young lady who has attracted much attention in New York, where she has spoken frequently upon her favorite theme, and has received very complimentary notices from the leading papers.

Miss Stagg is accompanied by Miss Emma Steiner, leader of the only ladies' orchestra in New York city, who will preside at the piano.

The lecture will be free and everybody, especially those opposed to woman suffrage, are invited.

The lecture will be given either Thursday or Friday evening.

Dr. Hand's Diarrhœa Mixture.

"My baby is subject to severe attacks of diarrhœa. During the last sickness, Dr. Hand's Diarrhœa Mixture was freely given and an immediate cure resulted. It would have required a dozen visits of a physician as on former occasions. I believe Dr. Hand's Remedies would have saved the life of the child I lost, had they been within my reach at the time of its sickness." Mrs. F. H. Bennett, 722 New street, Camden, N. J. Sold at all drug stores, 25 cents.

CONFLAGRATION IN ELLENVILLE.

The large furniture store and undertaking establishment of W. R. Denman, in Ellenville, was totally destroyed by fire, this morning. The fire was discovered about 1:30 o'clock, but had made such headway by that time that it was impossible to save but a few chairs which were near the door. A hearse was also got out but it was badly damaged.

The firemen fought the flames bravely until 5 o'clock, this morning, and would have been able to save the building but for the fact that a pile of about 150 mattresses on the top floor burned like tinder, and they could not reach them with their streams.

Only the front wall of the building was left standing and the goods were all destroyed.

The carpenter shop of D. H. Fuller in the rear of the store was badly damaged.

Mr. Denman started in business last spring and has been very successful. He carried a large stock of goods and his loss is very heavy. He has some insurance, but it is insignificant as compared with his loss. He dropped one of his policies recently on account of the increase in the rate of insurance.

The origin of the fire is a mystery, but is believed by some to have been caused by lightning running in on the electric wires.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

A Bicyclist Runs Into a Wagon and Sustains a Fracture of the Leg.

Last evening between 8 and 9 o'clock, Wells, the young son of Supervisor Nelson Wood, and two or three companions were coasting on their wheels on Houston avenue. As they reached Academy avenue Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Van Tassell were passing in a carriage and young Wood being unable to stop or change his course ran directly in front of the horse.

He was knocked down, trampled upon by the horse and run over by the wagon. His bicycle became entangled in one of the wheels of the wagon and every spoke was broken, the wagon toppled over and Mrs. Van Tassel was thrown out and quite badly bruised.

It was found that the boy was badly hurt, one of his legs being broken.

The patrol wagon was called out and the boy was taken to his home. Physicians were summoned, who found that he had sustained a compound fracture of the right leg just below the knee, and was bruised in several places.

The companions of young Wood ran into the wreck and received slight injuries.

For Over Fifty Years.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup."

About six months ago my little son, aged three, was very much troubled with a breaking out on his scalp and behind his ear. The places effected were about as large as a silver dollar, the flesh seemed raw and covered with little blisters. The child suffered considerably, and was naturally very fretful. I tried several remedies without obtaining any beneficial results, in fact the eruptions seemed to be spreading and new places breaking out. I concluded to try the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and bought a box of CUTICURA, a cake of CUTICURA SOAP, and a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I washed the effected parts with the CUTICURA SOAP, taking care not to irritate the flesh, and applied CUTICURA. I noticed a change for the better in the appearance of the eruptions in twenty-four hours. I continued the treatment morning and night, and in two weeks the eruptions entirely disappeared, leaving the skin smooth and the scalp clean, in fact a perfect cure, as I have not seen any indications of any eruption or breaking out since. I gave the child only a few doses of the CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I consider your CUTICURA REMEDIES very valuable, and extend to less, a small supply constantly on hand. I believe CUTICURA would be excellent for applying to insect bites, which are very annoying in this country. C. A. ARMSTRONG, Swift Island, N. C.

CUTICURA REMEDIES cleanse the system by external and internal medication of every impurity and disease, and constitute the most effective treatment of modern times.
